Emerging Trends

CAR T-Cell Therapy: A Promising Option in Cancer Treatment

Our keynote presentation will be given by Dennis Cooper, MD, Medical Oncologist and Chief of the Blood and Marrow Transplantation Program at Rutgers Cancer Institute of New Jersey. He came to the Cancer Institute in January 2016 after spending more than 30 years at the Yale Cancer Center. Prior to joining the Medical Oncology Faculty, Dr. Cooper did his internship, residency and fellowship at Yale-New Haven Hospital and spent one year at the University of Pittsburgh as a Chief Resident in Internal Medicine. He became the Director of the Yale Stem Cell Transplant Program in 1997 and remained in that position for over 15 years. In addition to caring for patients undergoing autologous and allogeneic transplants, his major areas of clinical expertise are multiple myeloma, Hodgkin lymphoma, and non-Hodgkin lymphoma. Dr. Cooper is also an author or co-author of 56 peer-reviewed original manuscripts, mostly centered on patient management of patients with lymphoma and myeloma or after a stem cell transplant.

This lecture is a tribute to the memory of Sonya Greenwood, BSN, RN, OCN, former Research Nurse Clinician in the Hematology Oncology Group at Rutgers Cancer Institute of New Jersey. Sonya took great pride in her work as a nurse at the Cancer Institute, always demonstrating exceptional care and compassion. She was also a wonderfully caring woman, mother, wife, and daughter. Sonya was admired by all that came in contact with her, and she will forever be in our hearts.
